NORTH SETTLEMENT. MOUNT RICHMOND. MOUNT PISGAH. MITCHELL HOLLOW. MOUNT HAYDEN.

PANORAMIC VIEW OF WINDHAM, GREENE CO. N. Y.

This delightful village is situated twenty-five miles from Catskill and nine miles from railroad connection at Hunter; and is conceded to be the prettiest village in Greene County. The roads on all sides are excellent, and the approach from East Windham, for a long distance, is like a road through a park. Maple trees on each side of the turnpike, afford a shade for several miles. An air of taste and neatness pervades all things. There are three churches in the village—one Presbyterian and two Methodist; and two miles distant an Episcopal Church. Many mountain peaks can be seen about Windham, but Mount Pisgah, owing to its easy access and cleared summit, is visited by thousands every summer. The view from it includes the Capitol at Albany, Church spires at Troy, and many villages in the valley beneath; also mountains in Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Windham High Peak (3534 feet elevation) is but six miles distant, and a fine view of the Hudson River, for many miles, can be seen from the outlook on its pyramid-like crest. Black Dome (4004 feet elevation) is noted for the sublimity and vastness of its southwestern view—as represented by a sketch in Van Loan's Catskill Mountain Guide. The Batavia-Kill passes on its course to the Schoharie, near the village. Several bridges cross it and connect with "South Street," affording a pleasant ride on a sufficient elevation to view the whole village of Windham, and the mountains in the above sketch.

EIGHT MILES WEST OF THE HUDSON RIVER AND TWELVE MILES FROM THE VILLAGE OF CATSKILL, N. Y.

OPEN JUNE 15th to OCTOBER 1st.

THIS WELL-KNOWN SUMMER HOTEL is situated on one of the Eastern ledges of the summit of the Catskill Mountains, about 2,500 feet above tide-water, and, by reason of its peculiarly advantageous location on the front of the range, is the only Hotel that commands the Famous View of the Hudson Valley, which stretches out from the base of the mountains, below, to the Adirondacks in the North, the Green Mountains and the Berkshire Hills in the East, and the Highlands in the South, embracing an area of 10,000 square miles, with sixty miles of the River in the foreground. Aside from the famous Valley View, the immediately surrounding Mountain Scenery is hardly equaled on this continent.

The Hotel property consists—in addition to the House—of two beautiful Lakes and 3,500 acres of Forest and Farm Land, traversed in all directions by many miles of Paths and Rambles leading to noted places of interest; also seven miles of Carriage Road, beginning two miles below the Mountains and extending two miles beyond the summit, which connects with other roads to various points below and on top of the Mountains.

The Principal Drives include Kaaterskill Falls, Haines' Falls, Kaaterskill Clove, Fawn's Leap, Palenville, Tannersville and Hunter Village.

The atmosphere is delightful, invigorating and pure, the great elevation and surrounding forests rendering it absolutely free from malaria. It affords relief to sufferers from Chills and Fever, Asthma, Hay Fever, Loss of Appetite and General Debility.

The Temperature is Always from Fifteen to Twenty Degrees Lower than at Catskill Village, New York City or Philadelphia.

The location and surroundings are in all respects the most desirable in the entire range of the Catskills; and no Hotel similarly situated is so easy of access or so near in time to New York City. As a resort for transient visitors to the Mountains it has many and great advantages over other localities. The completion of which will be ready for travel about the middle of June, will reduce the time from Catskill Landing to the Hotel about two hours. The heat, dust and mud incident to the stage ride of former years will be avoided. The Locomotives and Cars will be new and equipped with the most approved brakes and other appliances for the safety and comfort of passengers. During the season of Summer travel there will be at least four trains each way daily, making close connection at CATSKILL LANDING with the steamers "Albany" and "Vibbard" of the Hudson River Day Line, the Catskill Night Boats, and the principal trains of the N. Y. C. and H. R. RR.

Passengers for the Catskill Mountain House will leave the railroad at MOUNTAIN HOUSE STATION and take C. A. BEACH'S CARRIAGES to the Hotel.

HOW TO REACH CATSKILL.

Catskill Landing.

The pleasantest route to the Catskills during the Summer season is by water. There are two daily lines between New York and Catskill—Day Line and Night Line.

One of the Day boats, either the "Albany" or "Vibbard," leaves New York every morning at 9 A. M., and arrives at Catskill at 3½ P. M., allowing the passengers ample time to reach the most distant points before dark.

Returning, they leave Catskill at 11 A. M., arriving in New York at 5½ P. M. These two boats have private drawing-rooms for parties, and fine large dining-rooms on the main deck, where meals are served on the European plan.

The Catskill night line, "Kaaterskill" and "City of Catskill," leave foot of Harrison street at 6 P. M. daily (Sundays excepted). These boats are well known for their comfort and safety, and arrive in time to connect with the morning trains or stages for the mountains and different boarding sections. Parties coming by railroad get out at Catskill Station and cross the river in the steam ferryboat.

The Old Man of the Mountain.

On a clear day, when the mountain outline is distinct, it may be observed that the three most southern peaks, as seen from Catskill, form the figure of a man lying on his back; the eyelids closed, the knees elevated, and from the knees down the appearance of a Grecian female face, in profile, resting against them. This may be poor old Rip Van Winkle and his wife—both asleep, and for once, at least, in harmony.

Only a small portion of Catskill is seen from the river. The conspicuous building on the hill, a short distance from the landing, is the Prospect Park Hotel, with a front of two hundred and fifty feet, and a wing of one hundred and forty feet. A few fine residences show themselves among the trees on the banks of the Hudson, but the business portion of Catskill is hidden from view, as it is situated on the side of the Catskill Creek beyond the hill mentioned above. The grand old mountains can be seen in the background, with the Catskill Mountain House at its elevation of nearly 3,000 feet.

On the Way to the Mountains.

Leaving the village by either stage route or by the Catskill Mountain Railroad, the eye is attracted by the finely situated Grant House, on Jefferson Heights, one mile from the landing.

Regular stage lines and conveyances for the Hotels and larger Boarding Houses will be found ready to depart for all parts of the country; most of them having the name of the place of their destination painted distinctly on the side or end. The liverymen of the village will also be on hand with every style of turn-out for those who prefer a private conveyance.

VIEW

CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

"What see you when you get there?" asked Edwards.
"Creation!" said Natty.
Cooper's "Pioneers."

The world-wide reputation of the scenery of the Catskill Mountains makes it unnecessary to reproduce any of the numerous published descriptions that from time to time have appeared in the papers and magazines of the country. Our object—in this part of the Guide—is rather to assist the visitor (who has made the ascent of the best mountain road in this country) in finding the principal points of interest within four miles' radius of the Catskill Mountain House. We take this central point, as the space covered includes that portion which for fifty years has been visited by thousands in search of the sublime and the picturesque.

In this age of "hurry" many expect to see in a day what should occupy weeks. After looking from the rocky plateau in front of the Mountain House, over the ten thousand square miles spread out before them, including sixty miles of the Hudson River and portions of five States, and taking a hasty trip to the Kaaterskill Falls, they feel that they have "done" the mountains and must away.

This is a great mistake, for there are many lovely and romantic walks, over well-beaten paths, that can be taken within an hour.

We shall attempt in as few words as possible to guide you along the following paths, and trust with the aid of the maps prepared expressly to accompany this book, you may enjoy yourselves among these "everlasting hills."

WHERE TO WALK.

CIRCUIT OF SOUTH MOUNTAIN.

Take the direct path, following the painted guide-mark (round white, crossed by a red bar) until you climb the second ledge, where, by taking the right-hand path, along which the painted guide-mark (square white, with red dot) will lead you past many bowlders—covered with gray lichen—whose tops are carpeted with moss and ferns. You will soon come to the "Druid Rocks"—several detached rocks of conglomerate, one of which resembles a gigantic toad or rabbit, according to the position from which you observe it. For some distance, after passing these, you follow near the ledge of which they once formed a part; the path then leads you up this ledge and after going a short distance sweeps in a half-circle to the left and brings you to the next higher ledge, where, near each other, are the "Lemon Squeezer" and "Fairy Spring." Water dripping from this ledge has formed a small basin, and at times the border of it is covered with a green moss. The "Lemon Squeezer" is a very narrow fissure in the ledge known by some as the "Elfin Pass."

SECOND LEDGE ON SOUTH MOUNTAIN PATH.

Just beyond "Fairy Spring" turn to the left, and come out on top of South Mountain, as the path leading to the right is very difficult for strangers to follow any distance without a guide.

Follow the path to the most prominent rock (on which a star is painted) and then the path to the bowlder, not far distant, is easily found.

Return by way of the eastern face of South Mountain and descend through the "Pudding Stone Hall," which will bring you a moment afterwards to the second ledge, where you branched off to make the "Circuit of South Mountain." "Eagle Rock" and "The Sphinx" are portions of the front ledge on the South Mountain. To see the latter to advantage it is well to descend the ledge by a foot-path to the North of it.

DIRECT PATH TO SOUTH MOUNTAIN.

Follow the path that enters the mountain at the South-west corner of the Mountain House and look for the painted guide-mark (round white, crossed by a red bar) which leads you first up quite a small ledge and next up a second and much higher ledge, (at the top of this ledge the path divides), the direct path still ascends, and passing through "Pudding Stone Hall" the third ledge is ascended and the top of South Mountain reached. To the bowlder and back along the path marked out is but a short walk. High Peak and Round Top loom up grandly as seen from the top of South Mountain, while the Highlands at West Point and Mountains in New Jersey are visible on the Southern horizon.

PATH TO KAATERSKILL FALLS—SOUTH OF LAKE.

The shortest and shadiest path to the Kaaterskill Falls, begins back of the Mountain House barns, and is very distinct all the way.

There are two fine springs on the left as you go. Soon after passing Scribner's house and saw-mill you reach Glen Mary, near the Laurel House, and cross Lake Creek on a rustic bridge, which is but a short distance from the Kaaterskill Falls.

The above path on the South side of the Lake had better be avoided for a day or two after a rain, as some portions of it are badly drained.

PATH TO KAATERSKILL FALLS—NORTH OF LAKE.

Follow the main road or water-pipe beyond the two lakes, then take the path at the left, opposite the charcoal-pit—follow at the side of the stone fence—and the path through the woods is very direct to the Scribner Road. Cross over and enter the opposite lot on the right-hand side of the house. The path will lead you across Spruce Creek at the Laurel House laundry, near the Kaaterskill Falls.

On the South-side of the road, near the lakes, is a large bowlder that resembles an alligator with its jaws wide open.

THE KAATERSKILL FALLS.

The waters from the two lakes and from Spruce Creek combine, a short distance from the grand amphitheatre of rock, and plunges over the projecting seventy feet of massive roofing to the natural cavern beneath, a clear fall of one-hundred and eighty feet. It then passes a few yards over a smooth flat rock and takes another plunge of eighty feet.

Parties can descend by safe steps to the bottom of the two falls, two-hundred and sixty feet. A well-trodden and safe path leads behind the first fall and comes out on the opposite side of the amphitheatre. You can then cross back at the top of the second fall. The Bastion Falls are on this stream and can be reached by a path that follows the stream and comes out on the Clove road.

SUNSET ROCK ON SOUTH MOUNTAIN.

Start from Scribner's or Mary's Glen, near the Laurel House, and take the path marked out on the map. No visitor to the mountains should miss going to the Sunset Rock, as the view of the Clove is magnificent, and the grandeur of High Peak, seen from its base in the Kaaterskill, two-thousand feet below you, to its summit, four-thousand feet, is wonderful in its mass of unbroken foliage.

The view west takes in Haines' Falls, the Hunter Valley and distant mountains.

A remarkable echo is produced here by the firing of a gun.

PALENVILLE OVERLOOK, OR HIGH ROCK.

Take the direct path up and over South Mountain to the "Bowlder," near which, to the left, is a fissure in the ledge forming a narrow passage-way down through the ledge. The path is quite plain for some distance, but over the stony portion you will find it indicated by piles of stone.

The "Overlook" or "High Rock," is 1728 feet above the bed of the creek below, and is almost perpendicular.

The usual way back (to the Mountain House) is to follow the old wood-road on the east side of the mountain. Just before the rise in this road toward the "Long Level," the path at the right leads to "Moses' Rock."

MOSES' ROCK—DIRECT PATH.

Go down the mountain road and take the path beginning on the "Long Level." Pass by the old wood-road (leading to the Palenville Overlook) and descend the path to the rock, which is about one-hundred feet in length and twenty feet high. The face of the Rock is covered with moss, and at a point three feet from the ground water issues through a crevice in its side. A path from here leads to the foot of the mountain, directly below the Mountain House.

TO BOAT-HOUSE ON SOUTH LAKE.

Follow the main road west, and where it turns to the right, by an open space, take the path directly ahead among the trees.

TO BOATS ON NORTH LAKE.

Cross the mountain road where it turns to go down the mountain, by the carpenter's shop, and follow the wood-road down the bank to the lake.

LOVER'S RETREAT—SOUTH MOUNTAIN.

A few hundred feet South of the Mountain House and along the path near the edge of the ledge, a large hemlock and pine are so near each other that their roots above ground intermingle, forming seats for two. The path beyond here will lead to South Mountain, but the direct path is preferable.

Artist's Rock and Prospect Rock—North Mountain.

Go down the Mountain road to the general entrance of North Mountain, at the top of the second hill (where the road turns to the right and descends) and take the right-hand path. The first outlook is from a smooth ledge along the path, and a little beyond, Artist's Rock is situated. Here you have a fine view of the Mountain House and its projecting ledge. After leaving this point the path ascends some rude stone steps, and a few hundred feet beyond comes out on Prospect Rock. A more extended view both North and South can be had here than at the Mountain House. In the North the Adirondacks are visible on a clear day, and the city of Albany can be seen with a good opera glass. The southern view takes in the Highlands at West Point.

This spot was the favorite of Thomas Cole, the artist, whose studio in Catskill, in which he painted the "Voyage of Life," can be distinguished by those knowing its location.

SUNSET ROCK AND BEAR'S DEN—NORTH MOUNTAIN.

Passing "Artist's Rock" and "Prospect Rock," as above directed, the path ascends "Red Hill," and a short distance further passes to the left of a large rock. This is "Sunset Rock." Walk to the highest part of it, and facing the west, call out in a loud voice, and an echo will be heard coming as it were from the distant side of North Mountain. The path now leaves the front ledge, and passing rather to the left, brings you to "Jacob's Ladder."

One opening into the "Bear's Den" can be seen near the foot of the ladder, but a more interesting examination of the numerous caverns or fissures in the rock can be seen after ascending the ladder and going a short distance to the left, along the top of the ledge. From the top of the "Bear's Den" the view takes in both lakes, the Mountain House, South Mountain, High Peak and Round Top, the grand basin formed by the curve of North Mountain and the distant valley of the Hudson, backed by the more distant mountains of New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont. By many this is thought to be the grandest combination of mountain scenery to be met with here or elsewhere.

Fifty feet north of the "Bear's Den" is a bowlder of very fine white conglomerate, different from any other in this region. Imbedded in the conglomerate rock, which here forms the path, are pebbles of various sizes and colors that show glacial action. Many of them are rubbed and polished.

NEWMAN'S LEDGE—NORTH MOUNTAIN.

Continuing on from Bear's Den the path follows the front ledge a short distance and then winds among the bushes and trees of the next slope of North Mountain.

Turning to the left and ascending nearly to the top of the hill, the path to "Newman's Ledge" turns to the right (the path to crest of North Mountain continuing on up to the top).

A very impressive view is here obtained of Sleepy Hollow ravine, Cairo Round Top, the distant valley, and the windings of the mountain stage road. The perpendicular face of the ledge is ninety-nine feet, and is the most prominent one seen while ascending the mountain from the valley.

This ledge is named after the Rev. Newman Hall, of London, and is the termination of the path along the front ledge of North Mountain.

AROUND THE CREST OF NORTH MOUNTAIN.

Arriving at the intersection of the path to "Newman's Ledge," after leaving the "Bear's Den," continue on to the top of the slope, and turning to the north, pass to the east of the cellar (a natural cavity about one hundred feet square), and follow as near as possible the highest crest or ridge of the mountain.

When at the second outlook, notice particularly the direction of the Mountain House, and on the descent, keep as near as possible in that direction, as the foliage will prevent the house being again seen. By following this advice you will come out in the spring lot (shown on map), or, at all events, strike the water-pipe that crosses the spring lot, and affords a ready guide back to the Mountain House.

Around the crest is a long and difficult path, and strangers would do well to be accompanied by some one that is familiar with the route.

MARY'S GLEN—NORTH MOUNTAIN.

Go down the mountain road to the general entrance of North Mountain. Take the left hand path—a wood-road—part of the way along the eastern shore of North Lake; cross Ravine Creek, and just before reaching "Glen Mary," cross Ashley's Creek on a log placed there for the purpose. From here the sound of the fall can generally be heard, distant about two hundred feet up the creek.

Arriving at the falls, cross the stream, and ascend the bank so as to cross back again on the top of the falls, where a well defined path will bring you out on the main road by the charcoal pit, three quarters of a mile from the Mountain House. This delightful and shady walk is recommended to those who wish to avoid climbing, and is a favorite walk with the ladies.

WHERE TO RIDE.

AROUND THE CLOVE, 14 MILES, STOPPING AT HAINES' FALLS.

Go down the mountain road, and after reaching the foot of the second hill you are on the "Long Level." The Mountain House appears like a Grecian Temple perched on the overhanging rocks almost above you. As the house is lost from sight, you pass a wood-road leading down the mountain side at your right to "Moses' Rock." The next wood-road is on the left, at the top of "Featherbed Hill," used by those undertaking to reach "Rip Van Winkle's Ledge" by this difficult but very attractive route. At the foot of the hill, as the road turns to the right on "Short Level," a path is seen entering the woods on the left, which is a cut-off of half-a-mile.

The steep and half-circle curve at the end of "Short Level" is called "Cape Horn."

A little below this on the right is an open space named "Little Pine Orchard."

The steep portion of the road that comes next is "Dead Ox Hill," named in consequence of the sudden death of an ox that was overcome by exertion on drawing up too heavy a load. The path or cut-off spoken of above, comes out on the left of the foot of this hill. This is not far from the Rip Van Winkle House, and the flat rock marked "Sleepy Hollow,"* that has the reputation of being the identical rock on which old Rip slumbered for twenty years.

The bridge, crossed half-way down Sleepy Hollow Ravine, is called "Black Snake Bridge."

After passing over the level and shady road beyond the toll gate, at the foot of the mountain, and descending a steep hill near "Pelham's Four Corners," the Mountain House can be seen, for the first time since leaving the "Long Level."

Turn to the right at "Pelham's Four Corners" and follow the road along the base of the mountain. Occasionally the Mountain House will be in sight. When opposite, and nearest to the Mountain House (at Bogart's), a gate opens into an old mountain road that leads up the mountain to Moses' Rock, and is used as a path to the Mountain House.

The Pine grove on the left, not far beyond, is known as "Boardman's Grove," named after the Rev. Dr. Boardman, of Philadelphia.

At the intersection of this road with the Clove road, near the Palenville Post Office, turn to the right. This is near the entrance of the celebrated Kaaterskill Clove. On the right you see the "High Rock" or "Palenville Overlook," 1728 feet above the bed of the stream below, and on the left the shoulder or slope of "High Peak." Crossing the bridge at the real entrance of the Clove, you pass the studio of the Artist Hall, with its old fashioned chimney outside of the house and then stop at Burger's Hotel to water your horses.

*Irving's Legend of Sleepy Hollow is located at Tarrytown.

The "Palenville Overlook" is almost above you, and the house on the "High Rock" comes to the very edge of the precipice. The prominent ledge below it has an old quarry at its base, and during the past year a party of treasure-seekers have been digging here under the direction of some money-making fortune teller.

The peculiar water-worn cavities in the bed-rock of the stream, a few rods below the bridge, near the woolen factory, are well worth examination.

The "Artist's Grotto" and "La Belle Falls" are points of interest within ten minutes walk of Burger's. The path to them is at the toll-gate. Just beyond the toll gate a land-slide is passed, the clearing made by it giving a fine view across the gorge, and exhibiting a perpendicular wall of red shale, resembling a series of square blocks with their edges towards you.

A second slide is soon passed. Across the Kaaterskill from this a stream comes out of a wild looking ravine known as "The Gulf."

Old wood-roads lead to this ravine from the bridge near Burger's, and from the bridge at "Profile Rock." The road now curves to the left and takes you past the rustic cottage of E. T. Mason, to whom we are all indebted for removing the shanty at "Fawn's Leap," and with it the tax of twenty-five cents formerly charged each visitor at the beautiful falls.

You next pass in sight of "The Chasm," a precipice similar to the one opposite the first land slide, and also on the other side of the creek.

At and near the bridge that re-crosses the Kaaterskill is "Church's Ledge." On the left of it is a projecting rock resembling a man's face, the head covered with a fur hat. The "Profile Rock" is seen to the best advantage after crossing the bridge, and walking a few yards on the old wood-road to the right of it.

The rapids and falls near this bridge are much admired. By the continued action of pebbles, several circular holes have been worn in the bed rock, their sides smooth and straight. Hillyer's Ravine is at the western end of Church's Ledge. A few rods further on, and Fawn's Leap will be found, a beautiful fall hemmed in by high and rocky walls.

An old legend is, that a doe made the leap of the chasm over the fall, and that her fawn, in attempting to follow, fell into the deep pool, and swam round the pool for two days, the doe remaining near and watching it. It will repay the time taken to leave your conveyance and examine the beauty of the fall and its surroundings.

"Wild Cat Ravine" empties a small stream into the Kaaterskill Creek, just above or west of Fawn's Leap.

You next pass the ruins of the first boarding house in the Clove (Brockett's), and just beyond the remains of a settlement near the Old Tannery ruins. It was quite a hamlet when the mountains here were covered with hemlock.

Opposite this location can be seen "Buttermilk Falls," other falls being up the same ravine.

Looking high up to the right of the Clove Road you see the beautiful curve of South Mountain. In the autumn, when the leaves have fallen, the exposed numerous and regular ledges resemble the ruins of an immense amphitheatre.

Not far from the left side of the curve is the "Sunset Rock," of South Mountain.

The road now begins to rise, and you soon reach the Lake Creek bridge. A path leads from here up the stream to the Kaaterskill Falls, distant one mile passing Bastion Falls on the way.

A path to the left of the bridge leads down to the creek, and follows the same to Haines' Falls, passing on the way the foot of the great land slide, "Triton Cave," "Shelving Rock," and "The Five Cascades." From this bridge can be seen, on the opposite side of the Clove, Santa Cruz Ravine, being the nearest one to Haines' Falls.

All who have compassion for the horses will walk up the very steep portion of the road from this point to the top of the Clove.

Half-way from the bridge to the top of the Clove is "Dripping Rock," a large moss-covered rock that is always moist and dripping with water that oozes through its many crevices. A little beyond, a large bowlder infringes on the road, and after one more steep pull the top of the Clove is reached. The road turning to your right is very rough and seldom used. Continuing on the direct road just above and at the very top of the mountain we find ourselves on the brink of the Great Land Slide.

The road here has been repeatedly washed away down into the abyss to the depth of six hundred feet, intersecting the Kaaterskill just below the Cascades.

Opposite, High Peak looks down from over two thousand feet above.

Parties who wish a hard climb occasionally scramble down the Landslide and up Haines' Ravine From Shelving Rock and past the Cascades, the ascent is one long to be remembered. The hand of man is not visible here except in the rustic stairs winding up through the immense precipices

Some of the steps are really part of the mountain, being cut in the rocks by the strong arm of the mountaineer; but it will be found far easier to descend the stairs at Haines' Falls, and, continuing down the Cascades, return the same way. It is but a short distance from the Slide to the Haines' Falls House.

This very popular resort has just been enlarged so as to double its former capacity. New parlors and one hundred and sixty feet of new piazza now front the Cauterskill Clove and a splendid view through it. Over the plains and the Hudson may be seen the Berkshires of Massachusetts and Mount Riga in Connecticut.

The paths for Buttermilk, Wild Cat, and Viola Falls start here.

Mr. C. W. Haines, the proprietor, has recently had a Western Union Telegraph Office, with a direct New York wire, put in the house for the convenience of his guests.

Past the house, and but a few rods in the rear, is a platform in the grove. Here we alight and leave the horses to enjoy the shade after their hard pull up the mountain. But a few steps distant we see the gate.

On entering the gate a payment of 25 cents is made, once for the whole season.

Take the road down to the shady path, leading to the right, and to the top of the falls. Looking from the projecting rocks the scene is wild and grand. The water leaps and dashes through the gorge 475 feet in less than one-fourth of a mile.

A broad sheet of water at the main fall descends 150 feet, and at the Spray Fall 160 feet.

Half-way down the stairs is Crystal Spring, an appropriate name on account of the purity and coolness of the water.

From the foot of the stairway a fine view of the falls is had, even when the ordinary stream is running, but while there, a large body of water is allowed to plunge over the rocks above, and the scene then is wild and exciting. The dashing waters encircle the many irregular bowlders in the stream, and rush wildly to the cascades below.

THE FIVE CASCADES.

Walk down the stream a few yards, and cross it at the top of the first cascade, where a steep but safe stairs leads to its base.

Cross the stream and descend the second cascade, following the distinct path on below the fifth cascade to Shelving Rock, overhanging the Naiad's Bath.

The view here is grand beyond description. Looking up the gorge are the five cascades, from 30 to 90 feet each in height, and you see the top of Spray Falls above them, 400 feet from your position.

A visitor, having spent five years in Europe and California, delares this view from Shelving Rock to be the most beautiful scene of the kind he has ever witnessed.

This charming spot was visited years ago by Cole, Durand, Kensett, Cassilear, and others, when ropes and ladders had to be used in descending and ascending the ledges at the cascades.

The paths are now good, and none should fail to visit this favorite resort of the artists.

From Haines' Falls to the Mountain House there is a footpath, shady most of the way, as follows:

To Kaaterskill Falls, via Sphinx and Prospect Rock.....One and a half miles.
From the Kaaterskill Falls to the Mountain House.....One and a half miles.
Haines' Falls to the Mountain House, by road.....Four miles.
Haines' Falls to Palenville, entrance of Clove.....Three miles.
Haines' Falls to Catskill.....Thirteen miles.

Having digressed to describe the points of interest at and near Haines' Falls, we now continue the trip "Around the Clove."

Half a mile beyond Haines' Falls you cross a bridge at the saw-mill near the house of Miles Haines. Take the road to the right, passing the large mill pond, after which the road is almost due east to the road branching off to the Kaaterskill Falls and Laurel House, passing on the way the Clifton House and several smaller boarding houses, also passing the rough cross-road called "Featherbed Lane." A short distance from the Laurel House road, at the foot of a hill, you cross a bridge at Spruce Creek, the upper waters of which are carried through a pipe to a fine spring on the side of North Mountain, and thence direct to the Mountain House, furnishing an abundant supply of pure and cool water.

HAINE'S FALLS,
CATSKILL MOUNTAINS, N.Y.
C.W. HAINES.

From Spruce Creek bridge the road takes a south-easterly course, and is shady all the rest of the way, passing in sight of the water-pipe near the charcoal pit, crossing between the two lakes, and passing the "Alligator Rock" on the right hand, between the lake and the Mountain House.

It takes from four to five hours to make the circuit of the mountain above described, allowing a short time at Haines' Falls, and leaving Kaaterskill Falls for a separate visit.

A party out however, for a day's ride, could examine with more leisure the beauties on the way, and include a walk below the double falls of the Kaaterskill, at the Laurel House, and also a visit to the "Sunset Rock" on South Mountain.

"Prospect Rock," on Prospect Mountain, half a mile from the Laurel House, affords a splendid view of the Kaaterskill Falls. In Cooper's "Pioneers," Leather Stocking is made to say of the falls: "To my judgment, lad, it's the best piece of work that I've met with in the woods."

On the extreme edge of Prospect Mountain, overlooking the Clove, is "The Sphinx," a large bowlder standing upright, the top arching inwards and the outer part of its base within one yard of the precipice. This is midway between the Laurel House and Haines' Falls, a little off the direct path, but at the end of a plain and easy path. A charming view of the Clove, High Peak, Haines Falls, and the Hunter Valley can be had from the "Sphinx."

TO KAATERSKILL FALLS—FROM MOUNTAIN HOUSE.

Take the direct road west of the Mountain House, passing between the two lakes, and the second road leading to the left is the Laurel House and Kaaterskill Falls road.

TO HAINES' FALLS—FROM MOUNTAIN HOUSE.

Take the direct road west, passing the lakes and all cross-roads, turning to the left at the large mill-pond near Miles Haines', which is about half a mile from the falls.

TO HIGH PEAK—WALK FROM HAINES' FALLS.

The path to High Peak crosses the top of Haines' Falls, passes over an open field, enters the woods, and following along the side of the mountain, passes the upper part of Santa Cruz Ravine, near the falls of the same name, and then branches off to the right. It will be necessary to have a guide in taking a trip to High Peak. The view from High Peak covers a larger area than from any other spot on the Catskills.

TO "STAR ROCK," TANNERSVILLE—FROM MOUNTAIN HOUSE.

Take the direct road west to the intersection of the Clove road at the mill-pond near Miles Haines'. Turn to the right on the Tannersville and Hunter turnpike, in front of Miles Haines'.

Arriving at Tannersville, turn to the right at the corner of Roggen's Hotel, and go up the road nearly two miles to the first one leading to the right, and a short distance on the latter road a path on the left will lead you to the top of the knoll, from which can be seen a fine view of Stony Clove, Plattekill Clove, Eastkill Clove, and the surrounding mountains.

TO HUNTER VILLAGE—FROM THE MOUNTAIN HOUSE.

Take same route as to Tannersville, and five miles beyond is the pleasant village of Hunter, located on Schoharie Creek, the waters of which traverse two hundred miles before emptying into the Mohawk.

TO STONY CLOVE.

The road turns to the left, between Tannersville and Hunter. In the Clove the mountains tower up almost perpendicular two thousand feet.

The gorge is very narrow. Hunter Mountain on the west is 4,053 feet high. Ice can be found in the crevices of the rocks, on either side of the road, in the hottest part of the summer. Brook trout can be found in the stream passing through it. Refreshments can be obtained at Amos Connelly's, one and a half miles from the top of the Clove.

PLATTEKILL CLOVE.

Take the direct road west nearly to Tannersville. The road to the Clove branches off to the left. There are several falls in the stream passing through it.

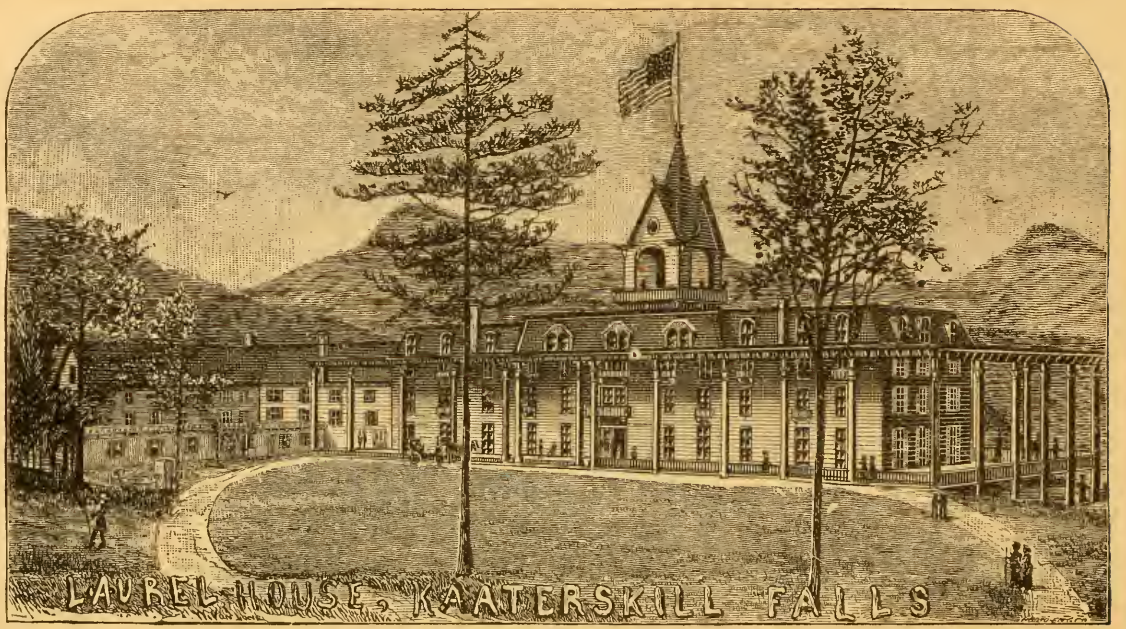
This wild mountain pass was used by the French and Indians in their attacks upon the early settlers of the valley of the Hudson.

ADDITIONAL RIDES AND WALKS.

Many otner Rides and Walks will suggest themselves to the lovers of mountain rambling who may have followed one or more of those already described, but the above list includes all that should certainly be gone over to see the wonders and beauties of this section of the Catskill Mountains.

The LAUREL HOUSE, at the Kaaterskill Falls, Catskill Mountains, 1½ Miles West of Mountain House.

J. L. SCHUTT - - - - - PROPRIETOR.



This new and spacious Hotel, recently enlarged and refurnished, is located at the head of the celebrated Kaaterskill Falls, on the western summit of the Catskills.

The Falls have been well described by BRYANT and COLE, and by COOPER in "The Pioneers." The first Fall is nearly 200 feet high, and the water looks like flakes of snow as it strikes in the pool below. Working along the rocky shelf it falls another hundred feet, and then descends the wooded glen in a succession of cascades.

In the immense rocky amphitheatre, which sweeps like mason-work in the rear of the first Fall, are paths on which the visitor may pass entirely around behind the falling water. Through the wide ravine may be seen the western side of High Peak and the adjacent mountains. The walks in the vicinity include those to Sunset Rock and North and South Mountains, and there are pleasant drives through The Clove and over the adjacent mountains.

GOOD HUNTING AND TROUT FISHING IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD.

To this well-established Summer Resort has been added a new and spacious building, 40x125 feet (four stories and basement), containing all modern improvements, such as Gas, Hot and Cold Baths, Electric Bells, etc. Over 600 feet of piazzas on the building—more than any other hotel on the mountains.

VILLAGE OF CATSKILL.

There are several well kept Hotels in the village; six churches, two banks, an academy, an opera house, steam woolen factory, steam paper mill, steam foundry, and well-filled stores in every line of business.

WHERE TO WALK, ABOUT CATSKILL.

The grounds about the Prospect Park Hotel are but a few moments walk from any part of the village, and the fine river view is one of the first sights shown to the visitor. Half a mile from the village, along the river shore, is Deeper Hook, near the picnic grounds in the lower grove belonging to the estate of the artist the late Thomas Cole.

No one should fail to visit Austin's Glen, known also as Hope Hollow, at Jefferson, about one and a-half miles from Catskill. The bed of a former rail-road track follows the course of the stream for some distance, and terminates at a natural fall. Near a cave in the glen is a spring of ice-cold water, convenient to refresh oneself before re-ascending the hill on the way homeward.

A walk on the "Snake Road" and return by making a circuit of the Grant House, will occupy two hours.

WHERE TO RIDE, ABOUT CATSKILL.

To Leeds (crossing the old stone bridge), and back by the way of Kaaterskill, or Belfast Mills, an easy two hours' ride.

To Athens and back, or turn to the left, one mile out on the Athens road, and passing the first left (unless a shorter way back is desired) and then the two right hand roads, keep on to Jefferson, where the turnpike to Catskill can be taken, or by adding ten minutes time, pass around the Grant House and its grounds, returning by the "Snake Road."

After passing the toll-gate, two miles from Catskill, on the Cairo road, take the first right hand road at the edge of a piece of woods, and follow it directly north for two miles and a half to Green's Lake. Half a mile south of Green's

CATSKILL, N. Y.

Lake is a smaller one, called Black Lake, or Canoe Lake, the approach to which is through farm lands on the east side of the road. For a longer ride in this direction, continue on for a mile and a-half beyond Green's Lake to the Colaberg, thence westerly to the High Hill and back by way of the Indian Ridge road to Leeds.

Still another long ride, is to take the left hand road one mile beyond Leeds, at the stone schoolhouse, and pass the five mile woods. You can come out on the Catskill Mountain road, half way to the mountain, or can strike the Mountain road nearer Catskill at the top of "Clay Hill." Another route back, is to follow down the Kaaterskill Creek, passing Eckler's at Belfast Mills.

One of the finest rides, is to take the direct Catskill Mountain road west to the old King's road, following the latter to a left hand road that brings you to the brick school-house on the Saugerties road, thence north to its intersection with the Mountain road, one mile from the village.

Going south of the brick school house, and taking a road that returns through the woods on the right hand, affords a very fine view of the mountains. A delightful half-day ride is to take the old King's road to High Falls, crossing the bridge at the falls, and take the right hand road northward to the mountain turnpike, near the division of the Palenville and Catskill Mountain House roads, half-way from Catskill to the mountains.

BOATING AND FISHING.

The Hudson River and the beautiful Catskill Creek are well supplied with small pleasure boats, that are constantly in demand by the summer visitors. Rodger's Island, Ramshorn Creek, and up the Catskill to the dam, are pleasant sails within a mile of the village.

In the Spring of 1876 and 1877, sixty thousand Brook and Salmon Trout were put in the streams and lakes of the towns of Catskill and Cairo, and a Trout-Hatching Establishment, for the purpose of stocking all the streams and lakes in Greene County, is now in operation.

RAPID TRANSIT TO THE MOUNTAINS.

The Catskill Mountain Railroad affords a very comfortable and easy way of reaching the numerous attractive places near the Catskill Mountain House, Hotel Kaaterskill and Laurel House. An excursion or picnic to the Kaaterskill Clove, Rip Van Winkle Ravine, Kaaterskill and Haines' Falls, etc., is just the thing. Parties can leave Catskill in the morning, have the entire day to spend among the beauties of the Catskills, and return before dark.

PALENVILLE.

The well-known summer resort is at the entrance of the Kaaterskill Clove, amidst the beauties of the Catskills. It is a famous gathering place for landscape artists, as the wildness of the many ravines and the massive projecting rocks that can be seen above you on the South Mountain side of the Clove afford an endless variety of subjects for their pencils. This is a good starting point for any expedition to the mountains, being only three miles from the Kaaterskill Falls, Haines' Falls, Hotel Kaaterskill and the Catskill Mountain House.

ENTRANCE TO KAATERSKILL CLOVE.

The Kaaterskill Clove is visited by thousands in the summer months, and excursion parties from Catskill and other villages are seen daily passing through this attractive gorge—stopping to get a glance of the Profile Rock (see map); visiting Fawn's Leap, and "taking in" Haines' Falls and the Kaaterskill Falls before reaching the Catskill Mountain House, where the grand climax of the wonderful valley view is seen, before descending the mountain on the way homeward.

ADDRESS BOX 51, CATSKILL, N. Y.

W. I. HALLENBECK, Manager.

TANNERSVILLE.

This village is fifteen miles from Catskill, accessible by a daily line of stages passing through the Kaaterskill Clove (a map of which in this Guide will point out all interesting spots by the way). Among the Catskills, and on the Catskills, applies particularly to Tannersville, as the average height is about 2,000 feet above the Hudson, and in consequence the boarding houses are prosperous and improvements are constantly being made to meet the demands for more room. From Clum Hill—only one mile distant from Roggen's, and an easy walk—one may have a distant view of the Kaaterskill Falls, with a succession of mountain peaks of great beauty and variety of outline. Looking down Schoharie Valley the Hunter Mountain and Colonel's Chair indicates the position of Hunter, while, nine miles more distant, the village of Lexington is behind a prominent piece of woods, where the Colonel's Chair slopes from the left and intersects the slope of land from the woods referred to. Beyond this, at seven miles greater distance, is seen the Bloomberg Mountain, with a triangular cleared field near its summit. The shoulder of this mountain reaches the Schoharie Creek at Prattsville. The view from Clum Hill to the northeast overlooks the village of Tannersville, and shows plainly the black-capped Parker Mountain and "Star Rock" in the mid-distance, while beyond is Black Head, Black Dome and Thomas Cole, the exceedingly high mountains that look like a giant resting on his side, the Black Head to the right forming the head of the reposing figure. The East Kill Valley is between this peak and the Parker Mountain. A path has been marked out to the summit of Parker Mountain, but portions of it are quite steep, and persons not accustomed to much exertion had better continue their walk half a mile beyond, where almost the same view can be enjoyed from Star Rock and Prospect Rock, which are within a few rods of each other. South from Clum Hill is the Platterkill Clove. A road leads through it to the valley, but before the descent a connecting road branches off to the Overlook Mountain House, thus avoiding the necessity of going down one mountain to immediately climb a higher one. This new road, opened for the first time in 1880, is a delightful ride, and commands a magnificent valley view from the side of the Platterkill Mountain.

Stony Clove is but a few hours' ride and return to the place where ice is found during the hottest part of Summer. To Star Rock is a favorite walk, two miles and a half from Roggen's. The view down the East Kill Valley from it well repays the visitor. Raspberry Lane and Lovers' Retreat are but a few moments' walk from the Post Office. Hemlocks and maples afford an abundance of shade at either place.

The view of Stony Clove, as represented in the picture a few pages beyond, is seen from the turnpike road between Tannersville and Hunter, just before descending the hill to cross the bridge, not far from Hunter village.

The mountain seen through Stony Clove is the divide between it and the Warner Kill, the latter being a trout stream that joins the Stony Clove Creek at Chichester's, two miles from Phœnicia.

MOUNTAIN SUMMIT HOUSE.

S. S. MULFORD, TANNERSVILLE, GREENE COUNTY, N. Y.

This House—at an elevation of 2,054 feet above the Hudson—is on the direct road through the Kaaterskill Clove to the Summer Resorts on the mountains, and is the highest one on the route. The scenery in every direction is unsurpassed, while the extensive and spacious piazzas command views of various mountain peaks, many of which cannot be seen from any other house in this vicinity. Round Top, Twin Mountain, Sugar Loaf, Plateau Mountain, East Kill Mountain, Thomas Cole Mountain, Black Dome Mountain, North Mountain, South Mountain, Spruce Top and Clum Hill are plainly in sight, while the magnificent Hunter Mountain (the highest in Greene County), with its projecting spurs toward the observer, is but a few miles distant, and it fairly makes one feel cool to look in its dark ravines, between the shoulder named the Colonel's Chair and the eastern slope of this giant mountain forming one side of the wonderful Stony Clove.

STONY CLOVE, FROM HUNTER.

This pleasant village is one of the Summer resorts "Among the Catskills," and abounds in magnificent mountain scenery. It is central to many of the attractions sought for by the Summer visitor. Its elevation is 1,644 feet above tide-water, and immediately opposite—but two miles distant—is Hunter Mountain, 4,052 feet high, the highest peak of the whole Catskill range. The Schohariekill Creek passes through the village, and a good road follows by its side for more than twenty miles. Towering above Hunter is the "Colonel's Chair," 3,200 feet high, a mountain whose base reaches the Creek, and its peculiar form gave it the name.

Among the rides is one of four miles to a point in the Stony Clove, where ice can be found "all the year round." Hunter is nine miles from the Plaaterkill Clove, seven miles from Haines' Falls, nine miles from Kaaterskill Falls, ten miles from the Catskill Monntain House, eight miles from Jewett Heights, nine miles from Lexington, ten miles from Windham, and eleven miles from the Grand View Mountain House at East Windham. Pleasant walks abound in the vicinity—one to Mossy Brook, a mile south, and one to Lovers' Glen, a mile north—while, as a matter of course, frequent walks are taken to the extensive chair factory near the village. Telegraphic communication can be had with all parts of the country.

The most accessible route to Hunter is from Rondout to Phœnicia by the Ulster & Delaware Railroad, thence by the Stony Clove & Catskill Mountain Railroad through the renowned Stony Clove, where the Notch is walled in by abrupt mountains on either side more than three thousand feet in height. Stages leave Catskill at 7 A. M., reaching Hunter at 2 P. M.

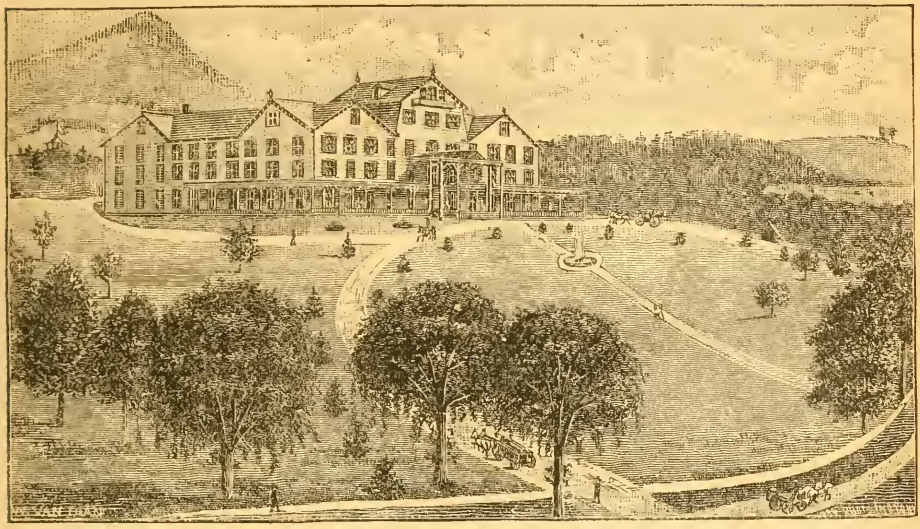
HUNTER, GREENE COUNTY, N. Y.



JAMES CANNANE, Proprietor.

THIS NEW AND COMMODIOUS HOUSE is situated on the high land of Hunter Village,

—The Centre of the Catskills—

Directly opposite the Hunter Mountain, the highest in Greene County (4,052 ft.), and, as the opposite cut shows, STONY CLOVE can be seen from this house, and the house is the first to be seen from the cars coming through the Clove. Surrounded by extensive grounds, over 100 acres, it is by nature adapted for Summer boarders, having many shady walks of considerable length—down ravines and up high ascents, one of the most conspicuous being Mount Canaan, 80 rods from side piazza; winding roads bring carriage or saddle-horse to the summit, where a half-mile track affords opportunity for pleasant recreation. The grand views from this point cannot be surpassed.

One of the LARGEST and BEST-LOCATED PIAZZAS on the MOUNTAINS, AROUND THREE SIDES OF THE HOUSE, 230-feet walk, 13 feet and 18 feet wide.

Hunter Mountain, Colonel's Chair and Stony Clove make up the front view from the house, while west, down the Schoharie Kill, the eye rests on the Prattsville Mountains. Tourists should see for themselves the wonderful beauty of the Catskills as here presented. Best water on the Catskills. ROOMS LARGE AND WELL VENTILATED. Accommodations for 200 guests. Terms according to size and location of room.

The summit of Hunter Mountain, the centre of the range and the highest peak of the Northern Catskills—4,052 feet—is but two and one-half miles distant.

A farm of thirty-five acres is connected with the house, furnishing ample supplies of fresh vegetables, milk, eggs, chickens, etc., for the table. This house can accommodate 100 guests. SIXTH SEASON.

THIS NEW AND ELEGANT HOUSE WILL BE OPENED TO GUESTS

——JUNE 1, 1881.——

The rapidity with which this house has sprung into popular favor has compelled its proprietor during the past winter to more than double its capacity. It has now accommodations for ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE. It is expensively built and finished and superbly furnished. Rooms spacious, convenient and well arranged. Bath-rooms, closets and other modern improvements. The house is second to none as an attractive, comfortable home-like summer resort. It is beautifully situated—about ten minutes' walk from the village of Lexington—with a climate of great salubrity. Malaria and mosquitos are unknown. Its site is an elevated plateau, 1,600 feet above tide water, near the base of the Vly Mountain, one of the highest elevations of the Catskills, its peak being central in the grand mountain chain. The view from its summit comprises in its scope the whole Catskill region and is unequaled in grandeur and sublimity.

The central location of the O'Hara House renders it most desirable, as excursions to all the principal points of interest among the Catskills can be made and return same day.

The DRIVES cannot be surpassed, every turn in the excellent mountain roads "presents new and attractive pictures, remarkable for outline, color and aërial perspective." Within a short distance of the house are facilities for Bathing, Boating and Fishing. Connected with the O'Hara House is a farm of 250 acres, with Farm House and Dairy, affording an unlimited supply of fresh vegetables, milk, cream and butter. Carriage-house and stabling accommodations. Daily mail and telegraph in the House, connecting with all points.

JEWETT HEIGHTS.

The situation of this small village is delightful, being literally "a city on a hill," but a good high one at that, being 1,800 feet elevation above the Hudson River.

A double row of splendid shade trees lines each side of the roadway, affording an avenue for some distance along the main street, as it gradually descends in the direction of Lexington. The whole range of mountains from Lexington to Hunter is before you, displaying eight enormous shoulders or arms, putting out towards the Schoharie Creek to protect, as it were, the mountain range from the encroachments of the great freshets that yearly attempt to wear away the banks of the creek on the mountain side.

Near Jewett, at a very high elevation, is a cave lately discovered. Many prominent mountain peaks are in sight from the village green, near the church and the post office. One of them, "Mount Richmond," is cleared almost to its summit, and looms up grandly like a pinnacle above and beyond the portion of the Jewett Mountain on which the village is situated.

It is but four miles, in an air line, to the top of the Catskills, so the grandeur of their appearance from Cairo is self-evident.

SUMMER RESORTS AMONG THE CATSKILLS,

ON THE LINE OF

THE ULSTER AND DELAWARE RAILROAD.

This portion of the Catskill Mountains is coming prominently before the summer tourist, as containing scenery of equal loveliness with other portions that have been more frequented until the opening of the Ulster and Delaware Railroad, which affords comfortable and easy access to many of the most healthy and elevated sections of these famous mountains—avoiding long and dusty stage routes, and overcoming by engineering skill the long and tiresome climbing necessary to reach those portions of the Catskills which the iron horse now accomplishes with comparative ease. By reference to the map in this guide book, it will be seen that the Ulster and Delaware Railroad bounds the southern and western slope of the Catskills. Rondout on the west bank of the Hudson, at the mouth of the Rondout Creek, is the starting point.

The fine steamers Baldwin and Cornell leave New York alternately, making a daily line connecting with the morning trains for the mountain region.

A TRIP ALONG THE WHOLE LINE!

Taking the passenger train at Rondout (city of Kingston) we ascend a steep grade, by the side of extensive cement quarries, and in ten minutes reach the Wallkill Valley Railroad junction, 184 feet above the Hudson. The Overlook Mountain is seen to the right, a few miles away. After crossing the flats beyond Kingston the track follows and ascends the southern bank of a long ravine, at the upper end of which is Stony Hollow, 8 miles from Rondout and 410 feet elevation. The turnpike road is seen below, with its stone tracks for the heavily loaded quarry wagons. The railroad crosses the Stony Hollow ravine at its western end, and in five minutes afterwards we reach West Hurley, 9 miles from Rondout and 530 feet above tide-water. On the approach from Stony Hollow to West Hurley the Overlook Mountain is in full view, with the fine hotel seen near its summit.

The eastern slope of the mountain looms up sharp against the sky, as it is the hinge or turning point of the Catskill range, where the course is changed westward almost at a right angle. It might well be called the Sentinel of the Catskills, being certainly on outpost duty. Halfway up the mountain, and to the left of the Overlook Mountain House, is seen the pleasantly situated house of George Mead, beyond

STONY CLOVE & CATSKILL MOUNTAIN RAILROAD.

This railroad passes through magnificent mountain scenery, and reaches several Summer Resort Villages from two to three hours sooner than possible by any other route. The cars pass through the notch at an elevation above the Hudson River of 2,085 feet. In the picture opposite, the train is seen emerging from the Stony Clove Notch, at the base of the Plateau Mountains (3,855 feet in height); and to the right is Hunter Mountain (4,052 feet high), being the highest mountain in Greene County. This beautiful mountain is opposite the village of Hunter, and in full view from Tannersville.

and over which the Twin Mountain and a portion of the Indian Head is visible. A portion of the road up the Overlook can be discerned below Mead's house.

West Hurley is the point of departure for the Overlook Mountain, from whose summit not only a magnificent valley view is obtained, but mountain upon mountain—north, west and south, in endless variety—in seven different States.

Three miles farther on the railroad is Olive Branch, 511 feet elevation and 12 miles from Rondout. The next station is Brooks' Crossing, 15 miles from the Hudson and 525 feet elevation.

Brodhead's Bridge is 17 miles from Rondout and 500 feet above the Hudson. This station is one and a half miles from Olive City and Bishop's Falls. The latter is on the Esopus, and is one of the objects of interest to the summer boarders of this vicinity. From the high bluffs of the creek, a short distance below them, a picturesque view is obtained.

Shokan, "at the gateway of the Catskills," is the next station in order, being 18 miles from the river and of 533 feet elevation. On approaching Shokan from Brodhead's Bridge the beautiful "High Point" mountain is seen to the left side of the cars, in a southerly direction. High Point is about 3,100 feet in height.

So far the road has been westward, and since leaving West Hurley a continuous line of hills on the right has cut off the mountains proper with the exception of a distant glimpse of the Overlook from Olive Branch, above that portion of the hills called "Little Tonche." The central and highest point is named "Ticetenyck," and the most western, near Boiceville, "Tonche Hook."

At Shokan the road takes a northerly course, and as the cars leave the station a fine view is presented on the left or westerly side of the train of a cluster of five mountains forming a crescent, and throwing off a shoulder from each peak more than a mile in length, that slopes gradually to the valley beneath to one center, like the spokes of a wheel. The peaks of these mountains are about four miles distant. The right-hand one is the "Wittenberg," and the next "Mount Cornell." Two miles back of this cluster is the "Peakamoose" and the great "Slide" mountains. These are not visible from Shokan, but are seen from the top of High Point and other places that will be mentioned hereafter. "Ketcham Hollow" is the name of the valley at the foot of the cluster of mountains just spoken of.

Boiceville is 21 miles from Rondout and 615 feet elevation.

Mount Pleasant—24 miles from the Hudson River and at an elevation of 700 feet above tidewater—might be called "The Grand Entrance" to this portion of the Catskills, for mountains close at hand on each side of the track form the outlet of the Shandaken Valley, the whole length of which affords a continuous panorama of ever-changing and delightful views. From Boiceville to one mile beyond Phœnicia, on the left or western side of the railroad, there is no gap or break in the mountains; but just over this mountain divide, at a distance of two miles, is the pleasant Woodland Valley, parallel with the railroad, about nine miles in extent, and reaching to the very foot of the Wittenberg, the Cornell and Slide mountains.

THE OVERLOOK, FROM WEST HILL AVE.

WHERE IS THE "WITTENBERG" AND "MOUNT CORNELL?"

These fine mountains can be seen from Shokan, but their peculiar form shows to better advantage from Mount Sheridan, opposite T. O'Neil's summer boarding-house.

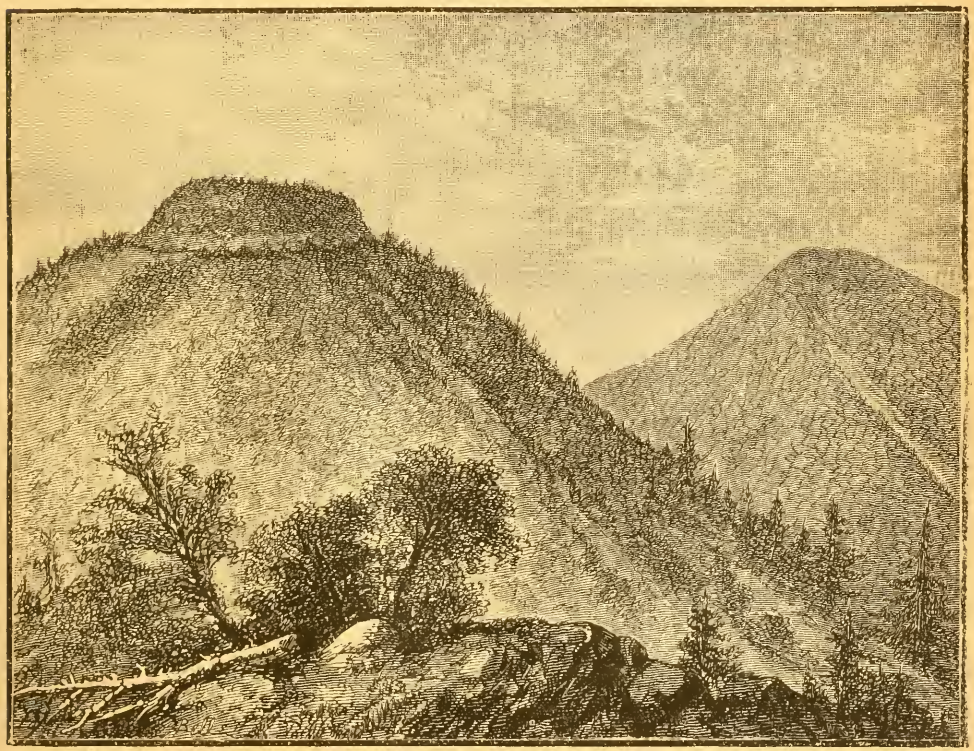
To ascend the Wittenberg it is well to enter the Woodland Valley, one mile from Phœnicia, and ride about four miles from the railroad, where the ascent begins on the eastern slope of the mountain, beneath a succession of ledges. There is a very good wood road to within half a mile of the summit. The Labyrinth is a collection of boulders, where shelter can be found in case of a storm. It is on the pathway from the end of the wood road up to the crest.

About one hundred yards from the summit is a spring—also by the side of the pathway—that fails only in time of a long drouth. The view from the Wittenberg is similar to that described from the Slide Mountain, having, however, some charms peculiarly its own; as, for instance, the beautiful slopes of the shoulders from the Wittenberg, Mount Cornell and three other peaks that surround Ketcham Hollow. It is a delightful walk to follow the crest connecting the Wittenberg and Mount Cornell. The pathway is on a ridge averaging ten feet in width, and at a very steep angle on the southern side, towards Ketcham Hollow; while the northern slope is more gradual, towards Woodland Valley. Bruin's Causeway is the appropriate name for this ridge, as the marks on the trees still indicate the scratches given by the bears at some former time. On this pathway to Mount Cornell are seen the ledges, thirty to forty feet high, that enclose a space about 1,000 feet long by 500 in width, forming the "Crown of Cornell." A dense growth of spruce caps the summit, from a rock among which, called "Cloud Cliff," is a fine near view of the Wittenberg, and also the "slide" on Slide Mountain.

PHŒNICIA—27 miles from Rondout and 798 feet elevation—is quite a central point; for this is the place of departure for Hunter and Tannersville, through the wonderful Stony Clove, where ice can be found all the year round. Phœnicia is just one mile from the entrance to the Woodland Valley, the easiest and most natural way to ascend the Wittenberg and Mount Cornell. It is two miles from Chichester, at which place is an extensive chair factory. The elegant new hotel at Phœnicia, the Tremper House, is seen at the right, covering, as it were, the entrance to Stony Clove. It is situated on a terrace 300 feet broad and 1,500 feet long, and on the premises is an unfailing spring of pure water, at sufficient height to supply each floor. Persons change here for The Stony Clove and Catskill Mountain Railroad. H. R. Winter, M. D., whose office is in the Tremper House, is the acknowledged Izaak Walton of the Shandaken Valley. He is the authority on any disputed point in relation to the fishery question in this region.

Directly back of the Tremper House is the southern portion of Mount Sheridan, from the ledges of which, at an elevation of 1,500 feet above the village, can be seen the Wittenberg, Mount Cornell, Panther Mountain, Balsam Mountain, and Slide Mountain. A portion of the "slide" from which the latter takes its name can also be seen. Looking down the Shandaken Valley from this position the gap in the Shawangunk Mountain forming the site of Lake Mohonk, and mountains beyond, in New Jersey, are visible. The Woodland Valley is also plainly in sight as far as the base of the Wittenberg and Cross Mountain, where the Woodland Creek turns to the right and follows the valley to its head at the foot of the Slide Mountain. Turning in an opposite direction, the view up the Shandaken Valley is very interesting. Beautiful mountains at each side and at the curve of the valley at Shandaken. The railroad, the Esopus Creek and the carriage road can be traced out the entire distance. A carriage road ascends Mount Tremper, from the grounds of the Tremper House to the very summit, affording a splendid panorama of most all the prominent peaks, without the necessity of even leaving the conveyance.

THE WITTENBERG, FROM MOUNT CORNELL.



MOUNT CORNELL, FROM THE WITTENBERG.

Fox Hollow is 5 miles from Phœnicia, 32 miles from Rondout, and at an elevation of 990 feet. Between the two stations we cross a bridge at the entrance of the Woodland Valley, and then come in sight of Broadstreet Hollow and Peck Hollow, the former a pass over the mountain to the valley of the West Kill. Mount Sheridan is at the right hand of Broadstreet Hollow, and "North Dome" at the left; the latter forming the right of Peck Hollow, a depression in the mountain one mile south of Shandaken. These two "hollows" and Bushnellville Clove are on the right or northern side of the road.

Shandaken is 33 miles from the river and 1,060 feet elevation. It is at the center of the Shandaken Valley and the outlet of Bushnellville Clove. Passengers for West Kill, Lexington, and Jewett Heights start from Shandaken and pass through the Deep Hollow before reaching West Kill. Ice can be found in the notch in the middle of the summer. Shandaken is but three miles from the entrance of the Big Indian Valley, and consequently many parties start from here for the Slide Mountain, 11 miles distant, as the ascent is more gradual than by any other route. This station is 8 miles from the "Summit," or highest part of the mountain over which the railroad crosses. The carriage road through the valley is on the eastern and northern side of the railroad—the Esopus Creek between them affording to the eye a cool and refreshing sight. A moment after leaving Shandaken the train passes a remarkable butternut tree, which was 75 years old in 1878 and that year bore seventy-five bushels of butternuts. An attempt was made to destroy it when a mere sapling by breaking the stem and putting a flat stone over the roots; but it sprouted again, and to day the many large branches—spread out almost horizontally and very near the ground—show the effect of the weight on them when young. The diameter of the circular space covered by the branches is 84 feet.

Big Indian is 36 miles from Rondout and 1,209 feet above the Hudson. A lattice-work bridge crosses the Esopus a short way beyond the station, from which a picturesque view up the Big Indian valley is obtained. To the right is the Balsam Mountain, showing a part of the "Lost Clove;" and four miles up the valley is a pyramidal peak seen beyond and above a grove of pines, the latter forming the center and foreground of the picture. This station being the nearest to Slide Mountain, by the usual way of reaching it, we digress to answer the frequently asked question:

"WHERE IS SLIDE MOUNTAIN, AND HOW CAN WE GET THERE?"

Slide Mountain is 7½ miles in an air line from Phœnicia, Shandaken, and Big Indian, being directly south of Shandaken. It is about 11 miles from Big Indian to the top of Slide Mountain; six miles of the distance the road is in fair condition, but the remainder is rough and uncomfortable for riding. Conveyances can be left at Dutcher's, five miles from the peak, and a guide obtained there to pilot the way. Small parties sometimes remain over night at Dutcher's, thus gaining more time to spend on the summit.

Three miles from Dutcher's we cross a bridge over the west branch of the Neversink, and a few rods beyond leave the road and follow the trail for two miles on the comparatively easy western slope of the mountain. Many of the trees on the summit of Slide Mountain are stunted by the weight of snow, and so flattened are the upper branches and matted together, that one can sit or lie on them as on a table. A fine view of the immense circle of mountains that outline the horizon in every direction can be obtained from the platform lately erected by Dutcher, the Guide.

"WHAT CAN BE SEEN FROM SLIDE MOUNTAIN?"

Directly east, at a distance of 50 miles, is Mount Everett, in Massachusetts—the most conspicuous landmark beyond the Hudson. The same distance southeast the Highlands and Newburgh Bay are visible.

"Sky Top" and "Eagle Cliff," at opposite sides of Lake Mohonk, 23 miles away, are in plain sight; also the Shawangunk range in the Wallkill Valley, and mountains at the south in New Jersey, and southwest in Pennsylvania. As our Guide is particularly for the Catskills, we now give consecutively the names of the peaks and other objects of interest among them, as seen from the Slide Mountain, beginning with the Overlook Mountain, which is the first prominent object to the left of Kingston, and 18 miles in an air line from the point of observation. The Overlook Mountain House is seen as a white spot almost at the top of the peak. On the same line, but below and near Slide Mountain, are the peaks of Mount Cornell and the Wittenberg.

To the left of the Overlook is the Plaaterskill Mountain, forming the chest to the "Old Man of the Mountain." The next peak to the left forms a perfect head, with eyes closed, a prominent nose and small chin. These two mountains, with the Overlook, form a well-proportioned figure seen in profile. A similar view is had of them from the Hudson River, at Catskill. In the mid-distance is Mount Tobias, on a line with the middle of the figure above described. The steeple of the church at Woodstock can be seen at the foot of the Overlook. Next to the Indian Head is "Twin Mountain," and between it and one in the same range, named "Sugar Loaf," looms up the High Peak of the Kaaterskill Clove, 24 miles distant. A long, flat-topped mountain comes next, named Plateau Mountain; below which is one in the foreground that reaches from Mount Pleasant to Phœnicia and Mount Tremper, showing several ledges that are near its top.

Three dome-like peaks at a distance of 28 miles—Black Head, Black Dome, and Thomas Cole—are visible next to the Plateau Mount, and just over the gap of Stony Clove. (The village of Hunter is four miles from the part of Stony Clove in sight.)

Next to Stony Clove is the Hunter Mountain, 4,052 feet high—the highest peak of the Catskills in Greene County, and the highest peak in sight from the Slide Mountain. The owner of the Hunter Mountain, with a clerical friend and a carpenter's water-level, made the ascent a year or so ago; and believing—as was the general impression—that the mountain was the highest of any in sight, began verifying his impression by carefully sighting over the level at many of the prominent peaks—east, north and west. At last he was considerably "taken back" when looking at a prominent peak in a southwesterly direction, for the level did not seem to work well—"must be out of order;" but, sure enough, the water bubble was exactly in the center of the glass tube, and the mountain peak 16 miles away was evidently higher than his favorite mountain; and not until then did it get noised about, and afterwards proved to be a fact, that the Slide Mountain is the highest of the Catskill range.

Over a depression to the left of the Hunter Mountain, named Hollow Tree Branch, is seen the Windham High Peak, distant 30 miles, the most northern peak in view of the front or eastern range of the Catskills. Below this, a little to the left, is seen the cleared land in Ox Clove, near Chichester. Mount Sheridan is next; and the bowl-like opening, named Broadstreet Hollow, shows beyond a beautiful peak with cleared lands almost to the summit, named Mount Richmond, about 30 miles distant, and on the boundary line between Greene and Schoharie counties. Through the Broadstreet Hollow is also seen the top of a range of mountains forming the divide between the West Kill and Schoharie Kill valleys. The "North Dome" is next in order, and the smaller opening is the upper portion of Peck Hollow.

Through Peck Hollow is seen the distant "Huntersfield Mountain," one of the same range as Mount Richmond, and about the same distance. Mount Sherill is next, and at the left is the Deep Hollow of Bushnellville Clove. Part of the distant range spoken of is seen through it.

On the same line, but only three miles distant, is the peak of the Panther Mount. One half of the base of this mountain extends from the entrance of the Woodland Valley to Big Indian—a semicircle of ten miles in length—the railroad being close at its base. The "Giant Ledge" is on the same line, between the Slide and the Panther mountains. To the left of the Deep Hollow is seen the Vly Mountain (near Lexington and West Kill), about 18 miles distant. On this same line, at the foot of Panther Mountain, is Shandaken. The next distant high peak is the Bloomberg Mountain, near Prattsville, 22 miles distant; and the continuation of that line of mountains is in Delaware County, until they connect with the distant Pennsylvania mountains in the southwest. Way below the Bloomberg is a small triangle of level land, eight miles distant, which is the only portion of the Shandaken Valley visible from Slide Mountain. It is at the entrance of the Big Indian Valley, and the commencement of the ascent of Pine Hill by the Ulster and Delaware Railroad.

The prominent lines of cleared mountains above this form the boundary line between the town of Halcott, in Greene County, and the valley of the Batavia Kill, in Delaware County. The large mountain immediately to the left of this triangle is the Balsam Mountain, showing the "Lost Clove" on its southern slope. The next two mountains in order are the Dry Brook and Big Indian; one or two others connect these with the Slide Mountain, forming the western boundary of the Big Indian Valley.

Two of these are yet in their pristine beauty, being densely clothed with hemlock—a remarkable fact in face of the tanneries that are still in the valley.

May the "woodman spare that tree" or trees until the Slide Mountain ceases to attract the summer tourist! We can spare them then, but not before. After viewing the scene from Slide Mountain how appropriate are the words in the Benedicite:

"O ye mountains and hills, bless ye the Lord; praise him, and magnify him forever!"

The beautiful and tortuous Esopus begins on the western slope of Slide Mountain. There are several branches of it in the Big Indian Valley, the road to Slide Mountain crossing one at a distance of two miles and one at six miles from Big Indian Station, while the main stream continues on and almost intersects the Neversink at the gap in the mountain range, where the water-shed is divided, forming the two streams.

Pine Hill—39 miles from Rondout and 1,660 feet elevation—is three miles from Big Indian and two miles from the highest point over which the railroad crosses. For a distance of five miles from Big Indian the grade is 145 feet to the mile.

As the train ascends on the side of the mountain and approaches Pine Hill Station, a very fine view is obtained of the upper end of the Shandaken Valley.

The large and attractive looking house surrounded by trees and shrubbery, seen below and across the valley, is the well-known Guigou House, half a mile from Pine Hill Station.

The village of Pine Hill next comes in sight, just below the station. An hour's walk to "Summit Hill" enables one to obtain a most charming view of mountain and valley, a sketch of which can be found in this Guide. This is a favorite resort of the summer boarders of Pine Hill, Griffin's Corners, and Big Indian. The top of the hill is cleared; and from picturesque ledges on the northern side one overlooks the well-cultivated farms of the town of Halcott, sees the village of Griffin's Corners, the line of railway from the "Summit" to Griffin's Corners and beyond—to the curve approaching Arkville—above which, to the right, are the fine rolling hills forming the divide between the town of Halcott, Greene County, and the Batavia Kill Valley in Delaware County.

Looking down the Shandaken Valley the village of Pine Hill appears at the base of Summit Hill, and the steep grade of the railroad is conspicuous, particularly if a train happens to pass either way at the time.

Over Pine Hill, at a distance of 12 miles, is seen the Slide Mountain ; the prominent peak at the left of it, 9 miles distant, is Panther Mountain. The near prominent peak, just over the railroad, is the Balsam Mountain.

The SUMMIT Station is 1,886 feet elevation above tidewater and 41 miles from Rondout—the highest point between the Hudson River and Stamford over which the cars pass. This is the Station for THE GRAND HOTEL. (See page 97.)

Between this and Pine Hill is a most graceful curve in the road, known as "The Horseshoe."

From the Summit it is down grade to and past Griffin's Corners to Arkville Station.

GRIFFIN'S CORNERS is 44 miles from Rondout and 1,516 feet elevation.

ARKVILLE (Dean's Corners) is 48 miles from the Hudson River and 1,344 feet elevation. Margaretville is nearly a mile distant, but an omnibus and carriage are always on hand to connect with every train, and free to guests of the Ackerly House.

The carriage road to Margaretville follows the base of the Pakataghkan Mountain—3,000 feet high—and crosses the east branch of the Delaware River at the village.

On the shaded flats, bordering the river, croquet grounds are pleasantly situated for the guests of the Ackerly House and the Riverside House.

From a ledge of rocks near the summit of the Pakataghkan a beautiful view can be had, looking down the valley through which courses the east branch of the Delaware River.

The railroad at Arkville Station makes a decided change in its course, and follows the east branch of the Delaware northeasterly to its source in the Grand Gorge.

KELLY'S CORNERS is 51 miles from Rondout and 1,374 feet elevation. It is at the entrance of the fine Batavia Kill valley, which runs almost parallel with the road, but separated from it by the range of mountains forming the western slope of the Catskills.

HALCOTTVILLE is 53 miles from the river and 1,399 feet elevation.

STRATTON'S FALLS is 57 miles from the Hudson and 1,456 feet elevation.

ROXBURY is 59 miles from Rondout and 1,497 feet elevation. It is a very pleasant village, spread out in one long street parallel to the railroad for about a mile. Wagon roads cross the mountain direct to Batavia Kill, and through Montgomery Hollow to Grand Gorge.

GRAND GORGE [Moresville] is six miles from Roxbury, 65 miles from Rondout and at an elevation of 1,570 feet. Just before reaching the station the train passes through a remarkable natural pass, just wide enough for the railroad track and a wagon road side by side. The mountains each side are very steep, and between them and also between the two roads is a spring forming the very head-waters of the east branch of the Delaware River. The station and village takes its name from the "Grand Gorge." The mountain on the right is named "Irish Mountain," and the one on the left is "Bald Mountain." Near the summit of a mountain near by —accessible by carriage— is a magnificent view that takes in most of the principal peaks of the Catskills, and also shows a portion of the Hudson River Valley and the mountains beyond.

Grand Gorge is the place of departure for Gilboa, Prattsville, Ashland and Windham. The village is less than a mile from the station, and stages are always on hand to meet the trains.

The railroad here takes another decided turn; having passed seventeen miles in a northeastern course, it now curves to the northwest, to its present terminus at Stamford, Delaware County.

STAMFORD is 74 miles from the Hudson River at Rondout, and has an elevation at the railroad station of 1,767 feet. This is the highest elevation of any village along the route. The last three miles of the road are at the side of the Utsyanthia Mountain, 3,365 feet high. There are two trains each way daily from Stamford, and many summer boarders, who are located for the time being elsewhere on the line of the railroad, make excursions to this place, and have ample time to walk about the pretty village and return the same day. Good hotels, however, tempt parties to remain over night.

The western branch of the Delaware takes its rise near Stamford.

OVERLOOK MOUNTAIN HOUSE,

CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

THIS BEAUTIFUL RESORT has been leased for the season of 1882 by C. K. HASKELL, long of the Delavan House, Albany, N. Y., and will be managed by C. W. SQUIRES, who has been for ten years cashier of the same hotel. The long connection of these gentlemen with such a famous hotel as the "Delavan," will insure a first-class house in every respect.

It will be thrown Open to the Public June 20.

The site of this hotel is the most delightful in the country. The Overlook Mountain forms a part of the celebrated Catskills, and is one of the highest peaks of the range. Its elevation is 3,000 feet above tidewater, over 600 feet higher than any other hotel on the Catskills or in the State of New York. The only point that gives an unbroken view to all points of the compass. The views are unequaled in the country for beauty and extent; the vision covers the States of Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, embracing an area of 30,000 square miles and 100 miles of the Valley of the Hudson. The atmosphere is very invigorating, and has been found a sure remedy for Hay Fever and Chills and Fever. The thermometer ranges from fifteen to twenty degrees below New York City.

The house, completed in the spring of 1878 and enlarged in 1879, is well appointed throughout. Especial care has been given to the sleeping rooms, which are thoroughly ventilated, all furnished with black walnut furniture and the best spring beds and hair mattresses in market. The house is heated by steam and lighted by gas, and is one of the most substantial, comfortable and best-arranged mountain resorts in the country.

A new turnpike road has been built from the Overlook to the Plattekill Clove, passing over the mountain at Grand View, thus opening up many points and places of interest—the only carriage drive along the crest of the mountain, 2,000 feet above the valley below, which is in full view in many places for a distance of two miles.

Three miles north of the house are a succession of wild and picturesque falls in the Plattekill Clove, an historical pass used by the French and Indians in their attacks upon the early settlers of the Valley of the Hudson, from their fort in Tory Swamp near the top of the mountain.

The steam facilities have been greatly improved, and hay-fever patients and others may depend on being made comfortable late in the season.

Improvements of Season.—A new drive around the top of Overlook Mountain; at an elevation of 3,000 feet above tidewater, and on the highest point of Overlook Mountain has been erected a tower, giving an unbroken view of the Hudson Valley and all the surrounding mountain scenery in every direction for 60 miles.

Telegraph office in the house in connection with all parts of the world. Two mails daily, each way.

OVERLOOK MOUNTAIN ATTRACTIONS.

The Walks.

The walks in the vicinity of the Overlook Mountain House are well marked, and a circuit of the highest part of the mountain and return to the house can be accomplished easily within an hour, even by ladies and children, without fatigue. Rustic seats will be found in numerous places along the path, most of them commanding magnificent views. "The Iron Duke" is a prominent ledge, resembling the profile of the Duke of Wellington. "Turtle Rock" is a boulder along the path which speaks for itself when looked at from a short distance beyond it.

Numerous outlooks bring various mountain peaks in sight, and it is an open question as to which is the most beautiful view. Some like the valley; others the western group of the Catskills. Many admire the great depth and massive foliage of the Indian Head and Twin Mountain group, which astonish the new comers by their apparent nearness as seen from the rear piazza or general entrance to the Hotel.

The Western View

just mentioned is also seen from the rear piazza, and includes a mass of mountain peaks too numerous to describe with sufficient accuracy for the visitors to pick them out without a diagram. Among these, however, the Plateau Mountain, from its long, table-like summit, is easily distinguished. This mountain divides Mink Hollow from Stony Clove. The nearest pyramidal peak westward is Mount Tobias, and a prominent one to the left of it is Ticetenyke. In the great distance is the mammoth Slide Mountain, seen beyond the connected cluster which includes the Wittenberg and Mount Cornell, ending at the left with High Point; this peak being near West Shokan, and marking the place where the Ulster and Delaware Railroad turns northward and enters the Catskills, following the Shandaken Valley and the Esopus Creek. Others again prefer the

from the pinnacle of the mountain, which includes Indian Head and Twin Mountain, and shows the Platterkill Mountain, and just above it the Kaaterskill High Peak, the Round Top, and between the latter and Indian Head a distant view of Black Head, Black Dome and Thomas Cole Mountains, with a portion of Parker Mountain (near Tannersville) below the Black Dome.

To the right of the High Peak can be seen a very small portion of North Mountain, a little to the right of which (below the spur of High Peak) is the location of the Catskill Mountain House. The far distant mountains seen over this spur are in Vermont, the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts joining them more to the right, and terminating at the conical mountain forming the southwest boundary of Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York. The smoke generally seen along the river in a northeasterly direction is from the iron furnace at Hudson, while the smoke at the extreme southern part of the Hudson is from the furnace at Poughkeepsie. The "Esopus Meadows," below Kingston, is a part of the Hudson which from its width resembles more a lake than a river. A moonlight view of the river from the Overlook is very effective.

The View from the Overlook taken as a Whole.

Mr. Sutton, in The Aldine, pronounces of the view from the Overlook as follows: "For a combination of every possible phase of landscape beauty, from the highest fertility, cultivation and order to barren sublimity and chaos, the sweeping prospect from the Overlook stands alone and unapproached in the whole world."

Echo Lake.

Echo Lake is two miles from the Overlook Mountain House. A log cabin refreshment saloon and boat house on the margin of the lake affords shelter in case of a summer shower. This lake has been stocked with trout. Several boats have been provided for use of those who wish to obtain the remarkable echo and see the reflection of the surrounding mountains in the pure, deep water.

The New Road.

The new road opened in 1880 from the Overlook Mountain to the head of the Platterkill Clove, connecting there with the turnpike road down the Schoharie valley to Tannersville and Hunter, affords easy access back and forth between the Catskill Mountain House and the Overlook Mountain House—avoiding the former tedious and roundabout way through the valley below the mountains. This new drive will become popular among the many rides from the various boarding houses on the Catskills, as the variety of view from the Overlook should be seen by all who appreciate a wonderful combination of valley aud mountain scenery from one point. This road will also bring more into notice the succession of beautiful falls in the Platterkill Clove, which are at short distances apart far below the carriage way, but easily reached from the regular thoroughfare through the Clove. The uppermost fall is but a few moments' walk from the intersection of the two roads. At "Grand View Rock" is a most extensive view of the Hudson River Valley and the mountains far beyond in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont. The river for about seventy miles is in sight, also the cities of Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Rondout and Hudson; and the villages of Rhinebeck, Tivoli, Saugerties, Red Hook, Barrytown, Catskill, and others. One mile of this new road is almost level, on the east face of the Platterkill Mountain, and about 2,700 feet above the river. This is one of the favorite walks from the Overlook; the Grand View Rock being only one mile from the house and at the beginning of the mile of level road. The whole four miles of this new road is shady, and abounds in picturesque "bits" pleasing to the mountain rambler.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

This may well be called "The Grand Entrance" to the Catskills; for after the train leaves the station on its mountain trip the road is closed in by the Tremper Mountain on the right and Mount Pleasant on the left—the iron horse has literally pierced the mountains beginning at this place. On the approach by rail to Mount Pleasant and within a mile of the station, a distant view to the right shows the Indian Head, the Twin Mountain, and a portion of the Sugar Loaf or Mink Mountain. The latter mountain when seen from Temple's Saw Mill—eight or ten miles from Mount Pleasant—has an appearance wholly different from any other in the Catskills, the contour resembling the mountains of Switzerland. It would make a charming picture.

A RETIRED AND DELIGHTFUL SUMMER RESIDENCE.

ADDRESS AS ABOVE.

THE GRAND HOTEL,

SUMMIT MOUNTAIN,

Summit Station, near Pine Hill,

ULSTER AND DELAWARE COUNTIES, N. Y.

Beautiful for situation is The Grand Hotel of the Catskills.

The pleasing outline of the Summit Mountain as it appears against the sky, with its varied shades of forest and cultivated lands, as seen from the car windows of the Ulster and Delaware train, passing Big Indian Station or during the ascent of Pine Hill, reminds one of some charming picture. The elegant and palatial work of art so near its crest, apparently embedded in the virgin forest, is a prominent feature in the landscape.

The contour of the mountain, as seen from the Guigou Bridge, lacks only a line of wall to give a fair representation of the site of the Holy Mount at Jerusalem.

Passing around the Horseshoe, above Pine Hill Station, a full and nearer view is afforded, from which point the great size of the building and its gently sloping lawn are plainly seen ; also the dense mass of hemlocks that fringe the western slope of Summit Mountain above and near the hotel. The carriage way from Summit Station to the Grand Hotel is over a gradual ascent through a most beautiful forest, and on emerging from the woods the magnificent building, as seen above you, and unobstructed for its full length, shows the full details of its architectural beauty and the perfectly chosen site.

The graceful towers, with their square, arched and bay windows in each, gives a pleasing change from the usual formality.

Guests leave the carriage or omnibus at the southern end of the main building, and passing through the hall, reach the Rotunda, from which access is had to the broad and lengthy piazza, 110 feet of which is twenty feet wide, where the wonderful mountain and valley view bursts upon them with astonishment.

The word magnificent can be applied without exaggeration.

The main building faces southwest, the extension wing faces S.S.W., and all the rooms on its front overlook the village of Pine Hill, down the Shandaken Valley to Big Indian, and in the distance a massive collection of mountains, including the Slide Mountain, 4,220 feet (which is the highest of all the Catskills), are distinctly visible.

The Panther Mountain, 3,800 feet, directly over Big Indian Station, with its numerous shoulders, is generally mistaken for the Slide, as its nearness projects a line against the sky at an apparent higher elevation than the Slide Mountain.

Table Mountain can be distinguished to the right of the Slide, and is the divide between the east branch of the Neversink and the Rondout. Over and above the horseshoe curve of the railroad the peak of Balsam Mountain, 3,300 feet, is visible. The ride between the Station and the Grand Hotel occupies but five minutes.

Immediately behind the hotel the maple and beech woods afford a shady and pleasant walk to the summit of the mountain—the house itself being on a plateau only 257 feet of less elevation. No one should fail to visit the top of Summit Mountain who delights in a combination of rugged and pastoral scenery that is sure to satisfy the expectation. The easy and comfortable access to this hotel of nearly 2,300 feet elevation is due to the fact that one can take the cars at Rondout, Ulster County, or at Jersey City, and come almost to its doors.

TERMS, $4.50 PER DAY. Special Arrangements by the Week or Month.

TROUT FISHING IN THE CATSKILLS.

By H. R. Winter, M.D.

Parties coming to the mountains seeking rest of mind, improvement of health, and desirous of pleasure and amusement, will find trout-fishing one of the best and most profitable recreations in the country. Those who have tried it universally admit that there is no known recreation which will relieve the mind of care and anxiety equal to it. Along the mountain streams are to be found the most romantic—the grandest—the most beautiful and picturesque scenes in nature during the summer months, when the foliage is in its brightest colors—numerous varieties of wild flowers—pure air to breathe, pure water to drink—the songs of birds, the music of the running waters—and, with the ever-changing variety of scenery, together with the excitement of trout-fishing, will make a person for the time forget he ever had any care, business or anxiety. I have heard a care-worn divine, after wandering along these streams nearly all day, make the mountains echo with his shouts of joy at the landing of a trout twelve inches in length, while at the same time he had a ten-pound basket well filled. I presume he had often dreamed of catching trout, and if he did his dreams were well realized; for during a stay of six weeks at Phœnicia—fishing about two days in a week, three to five hours each day—he with his friend caught nearly two thousand trout, after which the worthy reverend returned to his charge in Newark, N. J., much improved in mind and body.

The streams are made up of numerous tributaries, or small spring brooks, whose rise in some places is only at the side of the main stream, while the source of others can be traced a long distance up the hillside, and others may be found running along through forest and meadows nearly parallel to the main stream.

The quality of the water is of the purest kind—cool and good to drink at any time. It has been truly said: "These streams are the natural home of the trout."

The species are of the variety known as "brook trout" (Salmo Fontanalis); their size, as usually caught from these streams, is from six to twelve inches, although occasionally those of larger size are caught. Their flavor when properly served is the most delicious of any variety, and better than that of any other fish. Those who have eaten them — whether the delicate invalid or the individual in perfect health (though cynically inclined) — speak in the highest praise of the brook trout taken from the streams in the Catskills.

Persons inclined to try the piscatorial art ought at least to supply themselves with the following outfit: A pole, reel-line, bait, and fly hooks, basket with strap, waterproof boots and a drinking cup; all of which can be found in any of the larger cities where such articles are kept for sale. The best rod is made of split bamboo; although a rod made of ash and lance-wood will answer all practicable purposes, and can be obtained of good quality at a cost of from $5 to $15, which can be made by a change of tips to answer for bait or fly fishing; the length, 10½ to 12 feet, with two or three extra tips. The best line is a waterproof braided silk. A click reel of good quality. For bait hooks, the N. Y. trout No. 7 or 8 with me have a decided preference; yet the Carlisle Kinsey, Aberdeen, Limerick and other varieties are good and have their friends. For bait — worms, minnows, grubs, grasshoppers, eyes of trout and their fins are used.

The use of flies is generally governed by the ones which are on the water, selecting one that imitates the one trout are jumping for; therefore it is a good plan to have a variety, so that you may have at hand an exact imitation of the desired fly. The best selection of flies for these streams are among the following, any of which will be found good at certain times during the season: Queen of the Water, Beaverkill, Cowdung, Coachman, Yellow Dun, Stone, Great Dun, Professor, Montreal Governor; Red, Brown and Grizzly Hackle, Black Gnat, White Miller and Grasshopper. A good fly-book will be found a great convenience. The best hook for fly fishing is the Sprout, size No. 8 to 10, and the best tied flies are the cheapest. In Ulster County fishing is allowed from April 1 until September 1 of each year. In Greene County, by special act of the Board of Supervisors, fishing is allowed only in the months of July and August.

A new beginner may not be rewarded with great success in his first attempt at angling; but with any degree of observation, and by practice and perseverance, he may in a short time have his highest anticipations realized; and, if lucky enough to fasten a trout of sufficient size to set his reel to whizzing, he will experience sensations of delight which will be remembered long after returning to the busy cares of active life.
